Course	English	Grade	7th Grade	Duration	4 lesson hours (4x40')

This scenario is designed to assist teachers in providing an effective learning experience utilising technology. The teacher may utilise this scenario, which is presented as an exemplar, or adapt it to align with the specific requirements of the students and the physical conditions of the educational institution.

Overview

This learning scenario fosters continuous engagement and collaboration amongst the students, teachers, and peers through the effective utilisation of technology. Beginning with engaging warmup activities, the students embark on a learning journey that includes a puzzle designed with a visual editing tool, comprehension of teacher-prepared slides, a game of identification, and a detective-style activity requiring reading and speaking skills. Listening skills are further enhanced through a listening activity on EBA.

The students participate in self and peer evaluation. Active language use and the integration of technology are encouraged throughout. The students complete assignments using artificial intelligence powered tools refining their understanding by applying their writing skills. The teacher acts as a facilitator supporting the students throughout the learning process. This learning scenario promotes innovative learning approaches, emphasises formative assessment, and actively encourages student engagement and collaboration, ultimately leading to the successful acquisition of learning outcomes.

APPLICATION

Activities

Before the Lesson

Prior to the lesson, the teacher prepares a presentation titled Appearance and Personality to introduce the vocabulary using one of the interactive presentation tools (Annex-1). The teacher creates a Puzzle activity. The teacher designs an activity named What's on the Note? (Annex-2). The teacher writes a note with one letter in each square , including some punctuation and letters on the puzzle to provide clues. Since the students will solve it in groups, the teacher makes a few more copies and leaves the papers in different parts of the classroom before the students arrive.

Lesson 1 (Class)

Pre-Activity

The students come to the classroom and find the papers for the What's on the Note? activity left by the teacher (Annex-2). They ask the teacher what they are, and the teacher explains they'll find a password, to be revealed at the activity's end. To stimulate strategic thinking and foster collaboration, the students embark on a timed Puzzle challenge. Divided into groups, the students tackle various letter, detective, or password puzzles within a time limit. Upon completion, they're invited to tape their puzzles together and check the back, revealing the unit title and scenario name, which they then write on the board. This engaging introduction sparks curiosity and provides initial information about the lesson's topic and scenario content, prompting the teacher to display relevant visuals around the classroom.

While Activity

The teacher initiates a shape and drawing tool on the interactive whiteboard and draws a winding path, providing a creative way to practise vocabulary. After marking points along the path, the teacher introduces the topic of appearance and personality, explaining the meaning of each word and providing examples. The students are then tasked with finding and listing additional related words. Working in groups, they compete to find the most words, which they then write on the path and pronounce together. Following this, the teacher introduces the concept of antonyms, using coloured ropes to visually connect antonyms. The students then match words with their antonyms, and group representatives complete the activity on the board. This approach effectively engages the students, familiarises them with vocabulary, and reinforces learning through repetition and active participation.

Post-Activity

After this activity, the teacher delivers the Appearance and Personality presentation (Annex-1). The students recognise the vocabulary through the accompanying visuals and study the sample sentences. The teacher provides a brief explanation, discussing the use of "have got/has got" and how to form sentences describing features of appearance. Then the teacher introduces the question pattern, "What does she/he look like?" The remainder of the presentation will be covered in lesson 3.

Before the Lesson

In preparation for the lesson, the teacher writes descriptions of people with different appearances and places them in surprise egg boxes (Annex-3). To make the activity more appealing, the teacher can also put small stickers or sweets in the boxes. If there are no boxes available, the teacher can write the sentences on coloured wooden sticks or simply on pieces of paper. The teacher places extra pieces of paper in some of the boxes. These papers contain notes such as "the 3rd letter is A for the 10th space".

Lesson 2 (Class)

Pre-Activity

The teacher hides surprise egg boxes or wooden sticks, each containing a brief description of a person with a distinctive appearance, in various locations around the classroom (Annex-3). The teacher then displays one of the boxes to the students, informing them that the boxes or sticks are hidden somewhere in the classroom and inviting them to find them. The students then undertake a search for the materials in the classroom. The student who finds the boxes or sticks is responsible for delivering them to the teacher. This approach engages the students' anticipation and curiosity prior to the lesson, ensuring they are optimally prepared for the upcoming learning activity.

While Activity

The teacher introduces an engaging activity to the students and demonstrates how to do it. Selecting a surprise egg, the teacher opens it and reads the sentence inside aloud. Using the description provided, the teacher begins to draw a person's image with a shape and drawing tool, saving the completed drawing on the interactive whiteboard. The teacher then verifies the drawing by repeating the description from the paper. Following this demonstration, the students are invited to participate in the same activity. Each student takes a turn coming to the board, selecting an egg box, and opening it to reveal the description inside. They then draw the features described on the board. This process continues until all the surprise egg boxes have been opened and all descriptions have been read aloud. As the students open the boxes, they announce the letters, which the teacher writes on the board for the What's on the Note? activity (Annex-2). This collaborative and interactive approach not only reinforces the lesson but also fosters a sense of curiosity and engagement amongst the students. If there are no surprise egg boxes and no preparation is possible, the students can describe a visual feature to create an image.

Post-Activity

The teacher guides the students through the Listening Exercise: New Friends on EBA. They then complete the task together.

Before the Lesson

The teacher ensures that the Appearance and Personality presentation is ready for the lesson (Annex-1). Additionally, the teacher designs a self-evaluation form and a group performance evaluation form (Annex-4 and Annex-5). The teacher informs the students that they, along with their peers, will evaluate their performance at the end of the lesson.

Lesson 3 (Class)

Pre-Activity

The teacher and the students form a circle. They can carry out this activity in the school garden, before returning to the classroom. Alternatively, if there are many students, the teacher can split the class in two and play the game this way. The teacher stands in the middle as the students play a game where each person names a physical characteristic. Those with the same characteristics change places. Those who do not fit in stay in the middle. For example, if the teacher says, "I have dark brown hair." and everyone with dark brown hair switches places. Anyone unable to find a place remains in the centre. Then a student might say, "I have hazel eyes." and those with hazel eyes switch places. The person who is unable to find a place remains in the central position.

While Activity

The teacher informs the students that they will evaluate each other's performance at the end of the lesson emphasising the importance of being active. The game from the end of the Appearance and Personality presentation used in previous lessons is then initiated (Annex-1).

The teacher reads the description aloud and the students identify the first person. Afterwards, the teacher asks to find the person they have just read about. Once they have found the person, the students ask for another clue on the slide. They will use the letters in the names of the people they find to form a password, which increases their curiosity further. This activity can be done collectively or turned into a game. It combines both digital tools and instructional materials.

To play the game, the teacher divides the class into two groups. A desk with a game bell is placed at the front of the classroom. The teacher asks the students to read the description on the slide, after which the first student to correctly guess the person rings the bell. Points are awarded to the group of the student's group if they guess correctly. To emphasise the importance of correct answers and minimise random guesses, the teacher awards double points for accurate answers. For example, if a student says, "This is John." and it is the correct answer, their group earns ten points. The teacher then asks, "Can you explain?" If the student responds with an explanation such as, "It is written that the person has blond hair and blue eyes; the person being described is John." this explanation is correct, they earn an additional ten points. The students play the game according to these rules and determine the winning group congratulating them with applause. As they find people, they take notes on the clues given and gradually complete the What's on the Note? activity (Annex-2). After the game, the teacher concludes the slide show.

Post-Activity

The teacher asks, "What's on the note?" and the students find the note by arranging the letters. The group that finds the note can be rewarded. In this scenario, the note reads: "The key to success is: Never give up!" The teacher can create different notes or passwords by changing the slides or papers.

The teacher then distributes the self-evaluation form and the group performance evaluation form (Annex-4 and Annex-5). The students evaluate themselves and each of their group members. They then review the results together, provide feedback to each other, and identify their strengths and areas for improvement in group work and activities.

Before the Lesson

The teacher uses one of the tools for creating digital boards or post-its to create sections equal to the number of the students. During the lesson, each student will be expected to add a celebrity to their section and introduce them. The teacher prepares an Appearance Quiz for the last lesson with one of the gamified measurement and evaluation web tools (Annex-6).

Lesson 4 (IT Class)

Pre-Activity

The teacher displays a photo of a celebrity to capture the students' attention. The teacher asks questions about who the celebrity is and what they look like. After discussing this with the students for a while, the teacher announces that each student will introduce a celebrity they like.

While Activity

The teacher begins by launching the web tool for creating digital boards or post-its displaying the sections assigned to each student. The students are then required to select their favourite singer, actor, or celebrity and upload a photo of that person. They can also write a text comparing two famous people. Next, the teacher guides the students in writing an introduction to their chosen celebrity, incorporating all the information they have learned in previous lessons.

As the students work on their tasks, the teacher moves around the classroom, offering assistance to those who need it and observing their progress. Sufficient time is provided for the students to complete their assignments. Once the time is up, the teacher displays the link on the interactive whiteboard and organises a peer feedback session. Volunteer students read their work aloud, and classmates provide constructive feedback, highlighting strengths and offering suggestions for improvement. This approach encourages active listening and fosters a supportive learning environment.

Post-Activity

The teacher initiates the Appearance Quiz (Annex-6). The teacher ensures that the quiz covers previous topics and includes various question types. The students complete the activity in the IT classroom and share the link with their parents. The online quiz enables the teacher to assess what the students have learnt, identify incorrect answers, and determine who needs additional support. Based on the results, the teacher can decide which topics to review in the next lesson.

Homework/Assignment

The teacher assigns an engaging homework task that uses artificial intelligence to generate visuals. After demonstrating how to use the artificial intelligence powered tool, the teacher encourages the students to design a person using the information they have learnt. The students save their AI-generated images and share them on EBA wall, accompanied by their written descriptions from the web tool. The teacher then reviews the images and written work submitted, preparing to discuss them in the next lesson.
